Part 2

Superlative adjetives

Un adjetivo superlativo expresa el grado extremo o más alto de una cualidad. Podemos utilizar adjetivos superlativos cuando hablamos de tres o más cosas (no de dos cosas).

Agregamos la palabra the + el sufijo -est.

Examples:

Hummingbirds are the smallest birds in the world.

Albatrosses have got the biggest wings.

Cheetahs are the fastest land animal.

Spelling rules:

Si el adjetivo tiene más de 2 silabas, usamos “the most...”

Examples: Punta Arenas is the most beautiful city I've visited.

(Punta arenas es la ciudad mas hermosa que he visitado.)

That was the most beautiful bird I've ever seen.

(Esa fue el ave mas hermosa que he visto)

Si el adjetivo termina en consonante + y, está la cambiamos por -i:

Examples: Pretty: Hummingbirds are the prettiest bird, in my opinion.

(Colibris son las aves más hermosas, en mi opinión)

Happy: The quokkas are the happiest animals in the world.

(Las quokkas son los animales más felices del mundo)

Irregular adjectives

Adjetivo	Superlativo
good	The best
bad	The worst
far	The furthest
little	The least

Write the missing words in the sentences. Use superlatives (the –est)

1. Whales are the heaviest animals on earth. (heavy)

2. Lake Baikal is _____ lake in the world. (deep)

3. A chimpanzee is the most intelligent among a sheep and a donkey. (intelligent)

4. A butterfly is _____ among group of dogs. (small)

Fantastic Research and Where to Find it: The Creatures in Harry Potter

One of the best things about J.K. Rowling's Harry Potter series is the amount of work that she did to recreate another world. Fans of the book love the effort she put into not just her characters but the 'wizarding universe' that surrounds them. This extends to the animals.

Animals are important in Harry Potter. One of the supporting characters, Rubeus Hagrid, is a teacher in the subject Care of Magical Creatures, and the creatures here range from unicorns, to hippogriffs, to completely made-up Blast Ended Skrewts. Sometimes they are important to the plot and sometimes they simply add to the feel of a magical land. The animals can be divided into three groups.

There are normal animals, such as cats and owls, which are slightly magically altered. In the books, one of the main character's cat has far greater intelligence than a normal cat; Crookshanks, who belongs to Hermione Granger, helps to uncover the real identity of an apparently normal rat named Scabbers. Examples that appear more frequently are the owls in the wizarding world. Here the owls are responsible for delivering the post.

The second group would be animals from or inspired by mythology. Some are more obvious than others; the children look after unicorns and unicorn foals in Care of Magical Creatures with the reader knowing that JK Rowling didn't invent those. But a less known fact is that Buckbeak, the very important Hippogriff in book 3, is not a Rowling creation. Hippogriffs, vast half eagle half horse beasts with wings, come from Latin mythology, and are said to be related to the more famous gryphon. Bigger than the Hippogriff is the Basilisk. The Basilisk is also a reference to mythology, but in Harry Potter the creature is far bigger than in the myth. There are many more examples of mythological monsters in Harry Potter, such as mandrakes, banshees, and Cerberus.

The last group consists of creatures that Rowling has made up. These are normally raised by a character in the book (Hagrid normally) for some purpose or other. The most famous examples include skrewts, bubotubers, and fire crabs.

Truly Rowling must be praised for her commitment to her work, right down to the animals, real, mythological, and invented, that inhabit it.
